ABOUT DALLAS

As the ninth-largest city and part of the fourth-largest metropolitan area in the nation, Dallas covers approximately 343 square miles and has a population of 1,241,162. Dallas is often lumped together with nearby Fort Worth. Together, the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex (DFW) is the most populous metropolitan area in the entire Southern U.S. If you're moving to Dallas from another major city you'll likely be pleasantly surprised by the housing options. You can easily find a beautiful and historic 3-bedroom home in Dallas. Newer developments tend to run a bit pricier.

If schools are a concern for you, according to Niche.com, eight of the Texas's top 20 schools are located in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, including the #2 and #3 spots, which are both in the Dallas Independent school district.

If activites are a concern for you, there's no shortage of fun stuff to do in Dallas. From plenty of green space to museums, restaurants, concerts and more, there is a never a dull moment in Dallas!
